REPORT ON THE ACTIVITIES OF THE INSTITUTE IN 1998

I. SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

1. Research programmes

In 1998, the Institute for Balkan Studies continued its scientific research into various issues relating to the Balkan countries and Greece, focusing its attention chiefly on the history of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The research is conducted mainly by the Institute's regular associates, though in some cases external associates —young researchers and scholars— are also involved.

Programmes in progress

1) The revival of the Albanian nationalism during the last decade of the 20th century and the simultaneous stirring up of the Cham issue by various Albanian circles rendered necessary the elaboration of a contemporary and multilateral study about the birth and evolution of the question even since the interwar period, as an analogous scientific work is absent from the Greek bibliography. This study is the result of the research effort made by the Professor of Aristotle University of Thessaloniki Basil Kondis, Director of the Institute for Balkan Studies, and Ms Eleutheria Manta, research associate of the Institute.

2) The research programme about the study of the relations between Bulgaria and FYROM, undertaken by the research associates of the Institute for Balkan Studies Mr Kyriakos D. Kentrotis and Mr Spyridon Sfetas, is continuing. The research effort has three main axes:
   a. The political relations between Sophia and Skopje after 1990.
   b. The tendencies of the historiography of the two countries with a special reference to the subjects of ethnogenesis, language and the concept of bulgarian "macedonianism" in FYROM.
   c. The consequences of a future approach between Bulgaria and FYROM.

However, the new situation formed by the NATO intervention in Yugoslavia renders unattainable for the time being the extraction of untimely conclusions and every forecast for the future course of the relations, as the dynamic of the evolutions broods serious dangers for the survival of the state of Skopje.

3) The Institute's research programme on the Greeks of Albania is also continuing. The collection and classification of the material from Greek, British, American, and French archives, relating to the period from the establishment of the Albanian state onwards have already been completed. The German archives acquired by the Institute last year are still being catalogued and classified.

Completed Programmes

1) The second phase of the research programme of the Institute for Balkan Studies on the Bulgarian Occupation of Eastern Macedonia and Thrace (1941-1944) was completed. At this phase the three associates of the programme — Georgios A. Kazamias, Xanthippi Kotzageorgi-Zymari, Tassos Hadzianastassiou — wrote the definite texts which include the conclusions of their research. The editing of the book to be published under the title Ανατολική Μακεδονία και Θράκη, 1941-1944. Ο χαρακτήρας, η ένταση και οι συνέπειες της βουλγαρικής κατοχής στην περιοχή (Eastern Macedonia and Thrace, 1941-1944. The character, the intensity and the consequences of the Bulgarian occupation in the region) had the associate of the Institute Ms Xanthippi Kotzageorgi-Zymari. The study has a length of 200 pages, it includes an appendix of maps and documents and it is divided in eight extensive units with the following titles: A. The concession of Eastern Macedonia and Thrace from Germans to Bulgaria. - B. The Greek Church in Eastern Macedonia and Thrace during the Occupation. - C. The assimilative policy of the Bulgarian authorities on the sectors of education, language, and civilisation in Eastern Macedonia and Thrace which were occupied by the Bulgars. - D. The economy of Eastern Macedonia and Thrace during the Bulgarian occupation. - E. The changes in the population in Eastern Macedonia and Thrace during the Occupation. - F. The Bulgarian policy of oppression and abuse of Greeks and other inhabitants in Eastern Macedonia and Thrace. - G. The national resistance against the Bulgarian occupation in Eastern Macedonia and Thrace. - H. The end of the Occupation.
2) The research programme on Greece’s image in Balkan national historiography, 1870-1995, which the Institute undertook in association with the General Secretariat for Research and Technology, was completed. The researchers involved—Eleutheria Manta, Xanthippi Kotzageorgi-Zymari, Spyridon Sfetas, and Kyriakos Kentrotis—have collected and processed the relevant bibliography from the libraries in Thessaloniki and have already classified the data relating to our Balkan neighbours’ image of Greece and the processes by which public opinion in the Balkan countries has been shaped. The final conclusions will be reported at a special meeting organised by the Institute, which will then publish them in a special volume.

European Research Programmes

In the framework of the European Union’s Lingua, Action D, Programme, the Institute for Balkan Studies and the Stichting Adviesen Begeleidingscentrum voor het Onderwijs in Amsterdam (ABC) worked together again this year on the Griffin project, devising a three-year Greek language course for Dutch secondary-school children.

Also in the framework of Lingua, Action D, the Institute collaborated with more than fifteen European research institutes and universities (co-ordinated by Hull University) on a project titled “Small is Beautiful: Less Widely Used, Less Taught Languages and Mobility”. The project involves devising a pilot method for learning the less widely used languages of the European Union, plus Norwegian and Icelandic, with the aim of encouraging mobility among the students of the EU member countries.

II. HISTORICAL ARCHIVES

The Institute for Balkan Studies has an important collection of archival material, comprising both original documents and copies. In recent years it has been supplemented by a number of microfilms from the British Foreign Office archives, which furnish useful data about the Balkan policy of Britain and the other powers of the time, as also about the internal political situation in the various Balkan countries. The Institute has also acquired a number of microfilms from the United States National Archives, which concern the Balkan countries and are being examined in sections. In 1998, the section relating to Greece between 1940 and 1954 (ninety-six microfilms) continued to be systematically studied and catalogued.

The study also continued of the archival material that the Institute has acquired from Bonn relating to the political developments in Albania, Bulgaria, and Greece during the Occupation.

The existing archive was supplemented by the personal archive of the Director, Professor Basil Kondis, which he has donated to the Institute and which comprises documents from the Historical Archive of the Greek Foreign Ministry. In the course of 1998 the archive started being catalogued and classified.

III. THE LIBRARY

The Institute for Balkan Studies has the largest library on Balkan subjects in the whole of Greece. The library was founded in 1953, the same year as the Institute itself.

The first books were donated from various sources, and the library was systematically supplemented thereafter with purchases, donations, and exchanges. The Institute for Balkan Studies exchanges books and periodicals with similar institutes both in Greece and abroad.

The library now occupies two floors of the Institute’s privately owned premises. The first floor also houses a reading room for scholars using the material. The books are located through a computerised system.

Apart from the Greek publications, most of the acquisitions are in one of the Balkan or Slavonic languages (Albanian, Bulgarian, Romanian, Russian, Serbo-Croat, Turkish, and the dialect spoken in FYROM). The library also contains a considerable number of books written in one of the four basic west European languages, English, French, German, or Italian.

There is also a notable collection of some 235 volumes printed before 1875. Their subject matter relates mainly to travel, history, and literature.
Books are selected according to strict criteria that limit accessions to works focusing on Balkan aspects of history, politics, international relations, economics, social sciences, folklore, religion, language, and art. The main focus of the selection of the material varies according to international historical, political, and social circumstances and changes in the Balkans.

The library is visited daily by an average of eight to ten students and university researchers, as also by many foreigners researching Balkan-related subjects.

The library contains approximately 22,500 books, that is 18,192 monographs, 1,450 pamphlets, 951 dictionaries and encyclopedias, 691 bibliographies, 767 conference proceedings, 260 doctoral theses, and 209 travel accounts. The titles of the periodicals, which consist a special unit, go up to 745, 200 of which are in current circulation. 30 periodicals were purchased, 120 were received under exchange systems, and 50 were donated.

During 1998 the library’s computer documentation system was completed and now it is working only with electronic system. The entries into the computer are 30,225. During this year 4,724 entries were added to the library’s computer system, 2,547 of which were books retrospectively indexed about the literature of Greece, and Romania, and pamphlets of the library. To these entries were also added 615 new titles received in the form of purchases (44 titles), exchanges (148 titles), and donations (423 titles). A total of 1,564 articles from 179 periodicals were indexed.

IV. LECTURES

1. On 23 November 1998, Professor Stelios Perakis, General Secretary for European Affairs of the Foreign Ministry, gave a lecture on: “Η βαλκανική πολιτική της Ευρωπαϊκής Ένωσης, οι προοπτικές και η ελληνική θέση”.

2. On 16 December 1998, Dr James Miller, historian-official of the State Department, gave a lecture on: “The American policy in Eastern Mediterranean”.

V. EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES

1. The School of Balkan Languages

The School of Balkan Languages and Russian (founded in 1963) continues its activities.
In the academic year 1998-1999 there were 25 classes with 16 teachers, 365 regular students, and 3 auditors.
Of the 365 regular students, 20 are studying the Albanian, 113 the Russian, 108 the Turkish, 48 the Bulgarian, 26 the Romanian and 50 the Serbian language.

2. The International Programme on Greek Language, History, and Culture

On 26 July - 23 August 1998 the Institute for Balkan Studies held its 26th International Programme on Greek Language, History and Culture for foreign scholars and students.
This Programme, which helps to promote modern Greek Studies at an international level and to foster Greek interests, was attended by 141 foreigners from 34 countries in Europe, America and Asia, most of whom were in receipt of scholarships from the Ministries of Culture and Education.
The proceedings of the Programme, based at the Xenia Helios Hotel in Peraia, were a resounding success. Every year this summer meeting makes our city a world centre for the study of the Greek language and Greek culture.
The Programme included four hours of language tuition daily, at three levels, in which all the students participated conscientiously; courses in modern Greek literature and history, and Byzantine and Classical archaeology in Macedonia; open discussions with professors, specialists, and experts in the history and culture of Greece, with special reference to the problems facing the modern Greeks, particularly those relating to Macedonia and Macedonian history; excursions to archaeological sites; guided tours of museums; a shadow theatre show; and Greek folk-dancing lessons. Finally, the Programme was supplemented as far as possible with unscheduled evening get-togethers for all the students, to help them to get to know each other better.

VI. PUBLICATIONS

The following publications came out in 1998:

1. Μακεδονία και Θράκη, 1941-1944, Κατοχή - Αντίσταση - Απελευθέρωση (αριθμ. εκδ. 269).

As it does every year, the Institute for Balkan Studies had its own stall at the 17th Panhellenic Book Fair, organised by the Publishers’ Association of Northern Greece and held in Thessaloniki from 21 May to 6 June.

The Institute sent 1,680 copies of its publications to various scientific institutions and libraries both in Greece and abroad, and donated 2,500 books to the libraries of associations and schools.
